Mayor: Pedestrian deaths down 20 percent

Mayor Bill de Blasio said pedestrian-related deaths are down 20 percent this year as compared to last.

Speaking at a Taxi and Limousine Commission meeting on Monday, the mayor said the lower number of pedestrian fatalities means components of his Vision Zero plan are paying off.

"That means more people are walking the streets today alive and well because these policies are starting to work," de Blasio said. WENDY JOAN BIDDLECOMBE

City booze manufacturer numbers triple since 2011

The number of businesses that produce wine, beer and hard cider in New York City has increased by 237 percent since 2011, the governor's office said on Monday.

New York City now has 24 beer manufacturers, up from six in 2011.

The city has also seen an explosion in craft distilleries with a total of 22, up from five in 2011, while the number of wineries has risen from six to 11 in that same period. LUCAS VAZQUEZ

Cops to be retrained in wake of Garner's death

Manhattan. Commissioner Bill Bratton was grilled by Council at a hearing on Monday.

All 35,000 New York City Police officers will undergo a new three-day training session on how to de-escalate confrontations and use force without injuring suspects.

Police Commissioner Bill Bratton revealed details of the training at a Council hearing on Monday.

Previously announced as part of the NYPD's response to the death of Staten Island man Eric Garner while in police custody, the training course is expected to be frequent, with comparisons made to the firearms qualification tests.

Preliminary figures estimate the training will cost $25 to $30 million.

Boots on ground

Bratton asks for 1,000 new NYPD officers

New York City's top cop said the Police Department needs more feet on the ground months after protesting City Council efforts to increase the NYPD head count. At the hearing, Commissioner Bratton warned lawmakers he would ask for money to pay for 1,000 more officers.

"We are in the process of closing in on those numbers, that it will be in excess of 1,000 additional officers we will be looking for," he told the Council.

Advocates hope that the transparency translates to public access to whatever curriculum is used.

"Force can be deadly, as we saw in the Eric Garner case," said Candis Tolliver, an assistant advocacy director with the New York Civil Liberties Union.

At the hearing, Bratton refused to support any legislation that would make chokeholds illegal.

Asked by Councilman Rory Lancman what failure in police training has led to arrests with chokeholds, Bratton objected to the word "failure" and the "allegation" of more than 1,100 chokehold complaints with the Civilian Complaint Review Board.

"Chokeholds are not illegal," Bratton said. "They are not against the law."

Costumed characters protest bill

Mickey and Elmo don't have Council member Andy King's back.

Costumed characters held a protest Monday at Duffy Square, where King and the Times Square Alliance announced a bill the council member is introducing on Wednesday.

If passed, the legislation would require the performers to register with the city, and submit to a background check.

"This bill is strictly about safety in New York," said King.

Hidden identity

"If you do come out, we want to know who you are."
Andy King

This summer, the characters banded together after a string of unfavorable incidents, including a performer punching a cop, forming the Association of Artists United for a Smile.

King said he was surprised the characters were counterprotesting, saying he's had two meetings with the group, and they had "flipped" on him.

Jose Escalona-Martinez, 41, who has performed as Batman for four years, said the licensing wouldn't matter to him.

"I'll do what they tell me to do," he said. WENDY JOAN BIDDLECOMBE

How to Tell Time Like a Man

Our digital-analog hybrid has two sides... tough and tougher. Get it now for an unbelievable $59!

Your watch shouldn't cost more than your car. It should look and feel like a power tool and not a piece of bling. Wearing it shouldn't make you think twice about swinging a hammer or changing a tire. A real man's timepiece needs to be ready for anything. But that's just my opinion. If you agree, maybe you're ready for the Stauer Centurion Hybrid. Use your Exclusive Insider Promotional Code below and I'll send it to you today for ONLY $59.

This watch doesn't do dainty. And neither do I. Call me old-fashioned, but I want my boots to be leather, my tires to be deep-tread monsters, and my steak thick and rare. Inspiration for a man's watch should come from things like fast cars, firefighters and power tools. And if you want to talk beauty, then let's discuss a 428 cubic inch V8.

Did I mention the $59 price tag? This is a LOT of machine for not a lot of money. The Stauer Centurion Hybrid sports a heavy-duty alloy body, chromed and detailed with a rotating bezel that allows you to track time and speed. The luminous hour and minute hands mean you can keep working into the night. And the dual digital displays give this watch a hybrid ability. The LCD windows displays the time, day and date, includes a stopwatch function, and features a bright green electro-luminescent backlight. We previously offered the Centurion for $199, but with the exclusive promotional code it's yours for ONLY $59!

No matter what, this watch can keep up. Thanks to the Stauer 30-day Money Back Guarantee, you've got time to prove it. If you're not totally satisfied, return it for a full refund of the purchase price. You also get a 2-year replacement guarantee on both movements. But I have a feeling the only problem you'll have is deciding whether to keep the Stauer Centurion on your dresser or tucked inside your toolbox.

Politicians push for Zadroga reauthorization

9/11. Parts of the bill that provide benefits to first responders is set to expire next year.

Thirteen years after the Sept. 11 attacks, state and local leaders are urging Congress to extend a law that compensates first responders and survivors of the terrorist attacks.

Steps from the World Trade Center, Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand was joined by Mayor Bill de Blasio and Reps. Peter King, Carolyn Maloney and Jerry Nadler in support of the James Zadroga 9/11 Health and Compensation Act.

Named after a NYPD officer who died in 2006 from an illness attributed to fallout from the attacks, the law was approved by Congress in 2010. Parts of the $4.3 billion bill are set to expire in 2015.

Visit Metro.us for the latest news about this year's 9/11 anniversary commemoration.

"For Congress to not continue to fulfill its undeniable moral obligation by reauthorizing these programs, they will close and our government will have turned its back on these heroes," Gillibrand said.

Supporters of the law said more than 30,000 responders and survivors from the day of the attacks have an illness or injury directly or indirectly caused by Sept. 11. More than two out of three of those require treatment for more than one ailment.

Both the House and Senate will see bills introduced before October.

"Why is there a question that brave men and women who served under the most adverse circumstances, after an attack on our country — why is there a question about them getting what they deserve?" de Blasio asked. "There should be no question. This should not be a debate."

Your primary focus is your suicide awareness project, Live Through This. What is it and how much time do you devote to it?
Live Through This is a series of portraits and stories of suicide attempt survivors. It's a mix of photography and oral history. I meet with an attempted survivor, have him or her tell me his or her story, and then I make a portrait. ... I also write articles about suicide awareness and do speaking engagements. I spend about 60 hours a week on it.

Do you generate a source of income through it?
If I get donations or sell merchandise, it all goes back to the project in a separate bank account. The only money I keep for myself is from the speaking engagements.

How do you pay your bills?
I work part-time as an administrative assistant at a university, which pays really well. I also rent a second room out in my apartment on Airbnb, which pays the bills through the summer and spring months. I also work as a photographer.

Dese'Rae Stage / PROVIDED

What is your dream career scenario?
I really want to continue to work as a suicide awareness advocate because the voice of people who have attempted suicide has been almost completely absent, and I can bring art to that, too.

Apple due to roll out iPhone 6 today

Tech. Will the new smartphone live up to the hype?

People line up at the Apple store at the 59th Street and Fifth Avenue in New York City. / GETTY IMAGES

The iPhone 6 is expected to be announced today, which means that eager techies have already predicted what Apple will announce in their highly secretive junket.

Among the most popular rumors is that the iPhone will get slightly bigger, boasting a 4.7-inch screen instead of the standard 4 inches. There's also rumors that there will be a second, even larger 5.5-inch model.

With the larger sizes comes a larger price tag. The jumbo model is expected to retail at $299. However, the larger phone will supposedly come with a flat sapphire crystal display to prevent cracked screens and a new 128GB storage option, in addition to other upgraded features. People will be able to get their hands on either phone later this month.

Price tag

The iPhone 6 is expected to start at $199 with a two-year contract.

While it's groundbreaking territory for the iPhone to have two different sizes, Jack Narcotta, analyst at Technology Business Research, Inc., said the company is simply playing catch-up to its competitors who already offer bigger screens, like the Samsung Galaxy Note and other Android models. "It's more noteworthy (no pun intended) that Apple will likely be offering iPhone users a choice. The real story should be Apple's expanding iPhone product line, not so much the focus on the screen's dimensions," he pointed out.

Ravens terminate contract of Ray Rice after video of punch

Rice was entering his seventh NFL season with the Ravens.

The Baltimore Ravens released Ray Rice on Monday after a video surfaced showing the three-time Pro Bowl running back punching his then-fiancee during an argument earlier this year.

A previously released video showed Rice dragging an unconscious Janay Palmer, who is now his wife, from an elevator at an Atlantic City casino, but the new one was taken from inside the elevator.

"The Baltimore Ravens terminated the contract of RB Ray Rice this afternoon," the team said in a one-sentence statement.

A short time later, the National Football League also took action against Rice.

"Commissioner Roger Goodell has announced that based on the new video evidence that became available today he has imposed an indefinite suspension on Ray Rice," the league said in a statement.

An NFL spokesman said the league had not seen the new video before suspending the 27-year-old Rice for two games, a punishment widely seen as too lenient.

"We requested from law enforcement any and all information about the incident, including the video from inside the elevator," NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said in an email to Reuters.

"That video was not made available to us and no one in our office has seen it until today." REUTERS

Twitter is testing a "buy" button in some tweets that allows a mobile user to buy directly from a tweet.

A small percentage of U.S. users were able to see the "buy" button starting on Monday, Twitter wrote in a blog post.

Facebook has also been testing a "buy" button on its website that will let consumers purchase products that are advertised on its network.

Twitter said an entire purchase could be completed in just a few taps of the smartphone screen.

Tapping on the "buy" button embedded in a tweet, the user will be prompted to enter shipping and payment information, which will be sent to the merchant for delivery. REUTERS

Hundreds of children stricken with respiratory illness

Hundreds of children in several states have been stricken by a serious respiratory illness, and federal health officials said on Monday that they have confirmed an unusual strain of virus in some children 6 weeks to 16 years old.

Clusters of respiratory illnesses have been seen in Kansas City and Chicago, and at least 10 more states are working with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to track the illnesses to determine if they are caused by enterovirus D68, said Anne Schuchat, director of the National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases at the CDC.

There is no treatment for the virus, also called HEV 68. REUTERS

Hike. Mountain lion attack leaves 6-year-old California boy injured

A mountain lion attacked and injured a 6-year-old boy hiking with family and friends on Sunday along a wooded trail in California's Silicon Valley before two adults managed to frighten the cat away, a state wildlife official said.

The attack occurred at about 1 p.m. local time in an open-space preserve adjacent to the historic Picchetti Ranch Winery just west of the town of Cupertino, said Lt. Patrick Foy of the state Department of Fish and Wildlife.

ATTACKS ON HUMANS ARE FAIRLY RARE. / GETTY IMAGES

The victim's parents reported that the child was walking about 10 feet ahead of the rest of the group — two adult couples each hiking with their three small children — when "the mountain lion came out of nowhere" and grabbed the boy.

The lion broke off its attack and vanished back into the woods when the two men in the group lunged at the cat shouting to scare it away, Foy said, adding the boy suffered bite wounds and scratches to his upper body. REUTERS

Justin Bieber assault charge dropped

An assault charge against pop star Justin Bieber was withdrawn in a Toronto court on Monday after the prosecutor said there was no reasonable prospect of conviction, clearing up one Canadian legal battle for the superstar just as another begins.

Bieber had been charged in January with the assault of a limousine driver in Toronto in December. The driver told police that he had picked up six people, including Bieber, outside a nightclub and that the singer had struck him on the back of the head several times during an altercation on the way to a hotel. TRADE LIKE A MILLIONAIRE

TIMOTHY SYKES

TIMOTHYSYKES.COM

Timothy Sykes is a millionaire stock trader and entrepreneur.

Words that lead to financial success

I have done much in my life; I made my first million before I was 22, wrote a best-selling book by age 26 and helped to create two millionaire students. But in addition to investing and teaching, I'm also an avid reader. Here are what I've learned are the three most important words to get ahead.

Word No. 1: Yes

Say yes to trying new things and meeting new people. Far too many people are narrow-minded and live their lives without ever giving life a chance to surprise them.

The world is a vast and mesmerizing place to be explored and experienced. Saying yes when opportunities arise will allow you to expand your mind and comfort zone, and I promise that you will see, taste, hear and smell things that will only enrich you and make you a much more well-rounded and interesting individual.

Word No. 2: No

Saying yes is great, and it will open many new doors to you, but sometimes you must also say no and close some of those doors. You must learn your limits or your life and your adventurous, fun-loving personality will be cut short.

The U.S. stock market is reaching new all-time highs every day after a dip in August. Be careful as September and October have been dangerous in the past.

A growing number of stock market bears have made every case possible for an upcoming crash, and yet the indices keep ticking higher. It's never paid to be a long-term bear of the U.S. — you'd think they would've learned by now!

For example, while I like to keep an open mind, I don't enjoy anything that risks great loss, injury or death, such as diving with great white sharks (as I was offered to do in South Africa) or buying into a potentially revolutionary new technology that has just become a penny stock. Be smart and meticulous, and always weigh the risk against the reward before blindly agreeing to something. If it makes you truly uncomfortable, just say no!

Word No. 3: Maybe

Life isn't so simple that every decision can be made with a quick yes or no; there's a wide gap in between that calls for a "maybe." This is my favorite word because it allows you to pause, consider all your options and choose the absolute best course of action. This is particularly helpful in the stock market, as there are risks and rewards to every investment. To get the best possible outcome, consider all the variables before making a decision.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

What Sykes likes this week

This week, Apple will finally announce its new products. I cannot wait!

Kei Nishikori became the first man from Asia to reach a tennis grand slam final, and Roger Federer's quarterfinal comeback was great entertainment.

Elon Musk, founder of Tesla, said his company's stock was "kind of high right now," marking the most honest words I've heard from any CEO in years.

A new royal baby for 2015

Prince William and Middleton play with George, who will soon have a "backup." / GETTY IMAGES

1

Great news for everyone except Prince Harry, who now takes yet another step back in the British monarchy's line of succession: Kate Middleton is pregnant once again, carrying her and Prince William's second child, Kensington Palace confirms. Also confirmed: Middleton is once again suffering from very acute morning sickness and is being treated by doctors. But now at least Harry will have a real job to do in coaching his upcoming niece or nephew how to best serve as "the backup" — as his late mother, Princess Diana, used to call him. I imagine he might also have some useful advice down the road about London nightlife, hangover cures and what questionable Halloween costumes to avoid. Visit www.metro.us for reactions from royals fans outside Buckingham Palace.

Everyone's getting married in Italy

Lots of additional happy romantic news to report today: George Clooney and Amal Alamuddin have chosen a location for their impending nuptials and Neil Patrick Harris and David Burtka disclosed that they secretly tied the knot over the weekend. Let's start with Clooney: The nuptials of the proverbial bachelor will take place in a couple of weeks in Venice, Italy, according to E! News. Clooney apparently used his time at the podium during the recent Celebrity Fight Night in Italy Gala in Florence to fill everyone in on his and Alamuddin's plans, including where and when they'll tie the knot. "He said he is an honorary 12-year resident of Italy and then said they were getting married in Venice," an attendee reports.

As for NPH and DB, their nuptials were in Italy, thought it was not disclosed what part. Harris tweeted, "Guess what? @DavidBurtka and I got married over the weekend. In Italy. Yup, we put the 'n' and 'd' in 'husband.'"

From 'Dexter' to 'Hedwig'

Speaking of NPH, you remember how for like a month this summer Harris starred in "Hedwig and the Angry Inch" on Broadway? He was replaced by Andrew Rannells last month and yesterday it was announced that Rannells will be replaced by Michael C. Hall! The actor best known as the serial killer "Dexter," will play the lead role from Oct. 16 through Jan. 4.

Miley just being Miley at NYFW

In response to the usual calls of "Who are you wearing?" during Fashion Week, pop troublemaker Miley Cyrus can respond, "No one!" She showed up to a top secret NYFW after-party looking very NSFW: She only wore a pair of pasties and pants. Let's just be glad she didn't follow that Chanel fashion rule of taking one item off before leaving the house.

'View' from the top can be nasty

Tensions are finally calming over at "The View" between Whoopi Goldberg and returning tablemate Rosie O'Donnell. You may have read gossip that "Whoopi and Rosie hate each other. They're constantly at odds," as a source had recently told Radar Online. So what's caused the ease of tensions? Apparently Goldberg has been in talks with ABC about leaving within the next two years, and O'Donnell can just wait her out. "Surprisingly, Rosie has decided not to rock the boat. She'll let Whoopi be the queen bee. Rosie knows she has ABC completely on her side." Sounds like a fun place to work.

Does Jon Stewart have a secrete dark side?

Rogak says Stewart has been preoccupied with filming "Rosewater," about journalist Maziar Bahari, right, and less focused on "The Daily Show." / GETTY IMAGES

Unauthorized biography. Lisa Rogak explores the lesser known side of Jon Stewart in her new book, "Angry Optimist."

He's one of the most popular guys on TV and comes across as not only funny, but genuinely kind. But Lisa Rogak, who profiles Jon Stewart in her latest unauthorized biography, "Angry Optimist: The Life And Times of Jon Stewart," says the TV personality has a dark side that would surprise his fans.

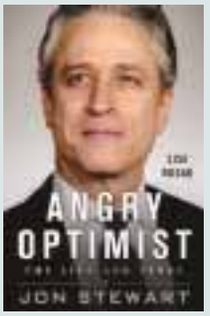
It should be noted that Rogak never interviewed Stewart or visited the set of "The Daily Show," but instead pulled information from many, many articles and interviews about him and talked to some people who have worked with him or knew him growing up. And while she does point out some positive traits, the shock lies in the revelation that Stewart is bitter and a hermit.

"The angst of working on the set [was exposed] a few years ago, and in a response to that, a PR person at Comedy Central contacted Bark magazine to do a story on how staff members could bring their dogs to work. It was like, 'Let's just stop the attention from all the angst, inner conflict and "bad boss" stories,'" Rogak says.

Unlike many celebrities, Stewart hasn't been lured in by the Hollywood scene and is rarely seen at red carpet events or parties. While he is presumably a happy family man, Rogak has her doubts about Stewart's wife, Tracey McShane. "I found one quote where she said she was anxious all the time," Rogak reports. "[Stewart] is angry all the time, but he believes everything will turn out for the better, and a part of that is his Jewish sensibility. ... I think they both share a great, grand insecurity."

As for what she thinks is next for Stewart, Rogak predicts that it all depends on how the movie he directed, "Rosewater," is perceived. "It just seems like he is going through the motions [with 'The Daily Show'] and not taking a lot of risks like he used to," she says. "I wouldn't be surprised if he were to announce he was leaving the show." You heard it here first.

How he compares



Stewart versus Colbert

Rogak, who has written more than 40 books including biographies of President Barack Obama, Stephen King and Shel Silverstein, says Stewart could not be more different from Stephen Colbert, someone else she released a biography about. "When I was working on [the Colbert book], everyone went out of their way to say he's a gentleman and a genuinely nice man," she says. "When I was doing the research on Jon Stewart, nobody used those terms."

Riding with death

Bikers. As "Sons of Anarchy" enters its final season, the fate of the motorcycle club lies with its heartbroken, revenge-seeking president. Will anyone survive?

The show returns tonight at 10 on FX. / PRASHANT GUPTA, FX

Death is a way of life for the outlaw bikers of "Sons of Anarchy." Still, the show surprised many with the murder of series regular Tara (Maggie Siff) at the end of Season 6, and now tragedy — and betrayal — hit the club harder than ever. The group's president, Jax (Charlie Hunnam), is hell-bent on revenge in the series' last 13 episodes; in teasers for the final season of the FX drama, he's even seen morphing into the Grim Reaper.

When Season 7 premieres, 10 days have passed since Tara's death. Jax, her long-time paramour, "is in a very schizophrenic state," Hunnam says. "He's obviously very, very sad and vulnerable and kind of broken, but there's a huge amount of vengeance and anger in his heart. At least in the very beginning … he knows what he wants to do, but he can't get away from the fact that the love of his life has just been taken from him."

HUNNAM'S JAX WILL BE HEADING IN A PRETTY DARK DIRECTION THIS SEASON. GETTY IMAGES

Jax certainly didn't see Tara's gruesome death-by-carving-fork coming, but neither did series creator Kurt Sutter — at least not in its minute details. Though he has always had a sense of where he wanted the series to end, Sutter says he was better off playing exact storylines by ear. Even in the middle of writing the final season, Sutter admits he isn't exactly sure where his characters will take him episode by episode.

"I've learned that the looser I grip that idea [of a blueprint], the better the seasons are," he says. "And this season really isn't any different. I came in with how I wanted the season to end, which will be obviously the end of the series. … But things change with different story ideas. So it's always sort of been heading in the same direction, but the way I'm getting there continuously changes."

One thing we know: Sutter has been hinting heavily that other members of the gang might not make it through the finale — and there aren't that many left to begin with. Fear the Reaper, indeed.

Love and Manson guest star this season. / GETTY IMAGES

'SOA' goes musical

Marilyn Manson and Courtney Love will appear on "SOA" this season, but not like you've typically seen them — they'll be playing a white supremacist and teacher, respectively. How'd Sutter snag them?

"Manson, I had become friends with through some music buddies and he's a huge fan of the show," Sutter says. "And that was him basically just wearing me down. … Courtney, I don't know that well. I was a huge Nirvana fan, and so there was that connection. She had expressed interest in wanting to work on the show, and then we had this role of a schoolteacher. And I thought, 'Who better than Courtney Love?'"

Everything to 'LOSE'

Opening band. Cymbals Eat Guitars grieve, grow up and rock out.

Loss of youth

D'Agostino says "LOSE" also deals with the loss of youth: "The rest of the record deals with ... how music makes me feel as compared to how it made me feel ... chasing that feeling when I was much younger and trying to write a record that makes me feel that way."

At its most basic level, a rock band can be thought of as a family, a group of people collectively devoted to a cause.

When a band member passes away, even at a band's genesis, it hits hard. Benjamin High, who was only part of New Jersey indie rock band Cymbals Eat Guitars for less than a year, died seven years ago. Though front man Joe D'Agostino has said that he's thought about his friend every day, he is only now dealing with the loss of High through his songwriting on the band's latest album, "LOSE."

"I met Ben at a house show in New Jersey in 2006, my last year of high school. We immediately clicked and became best friends through AOL Instant Messenger, just talking about music, hanging out and playing music together. And then he ended up playing bass in Cymbals Eat Guitars for a little bit," says D'Agostino.

D'Agostino's close relationships are important to him. In between cross-country tours, he lives with his parents, grandparents and elderly dog in Staten Island.

"LOSE" isn't just the first album to deal thematically with a member's death, it's the first to include songs that have anything close to traditional pop structures.

After the first two Cymbals albums — which explored unusual arrangements, psychedelia and eschewed choruses or repeated lyrics — didn't have the commercial returns they hoped for, the band decided to experiment with accessibility.

The result is a record that includes harmonica-laced cuts ("XR"), melancholy ballads ("Child Bride") and guitar pop ("Lifenet").

All are held together by D'Agostino's soulful voice.

"I wanted to couple the heavy subject matter with music that would make it reach people and tell the story that is really important to me, and to many of my friends who knew Ben and his family," D'Agostino says.

Top tips for Disney World

Orlando. Whether you visit Mickey every year or this is your first time, here's how to prep for the parks.

Kim Wright Wiley and Leigh Wiley Jenkins, authors of Fodor's annual "Walt Disney World with Kids" guidebook, are the ultimate Disney World experts. Here are their top tips for a successful vacation with the whole family.

Want to avoid the crowds? Head to Disney World in September. / ALL PHOTOS BY FLICKR VISION

When to go

Our favorite times to visit are September and early December. With the exception of Labor Day, September is the least crowded month to visit and early December doesn't yet have the crowds, but it does have the holiday shows and decorations. The parks run slightly shorter hours in the off-season, but since there are fewer people, you can still easily tour a park in a day.

Where to stay

Onsite Disney hotels are usually more expensive but allow quicker access to the parks. Offsite hotels have lower rates, but you have to drive to the parks or rely on their transportation, which can consist of only a few buses per day. If you find a good deal and have a car, consider staying offsite. Otherwise, onsite is your best bet.

Take a nap

Lots of families have reported success with this formula: Morning in the parks; afternoon at the hotel, lying by the pool or napping; evening back at the parks to catch the closing shows and fireworks.

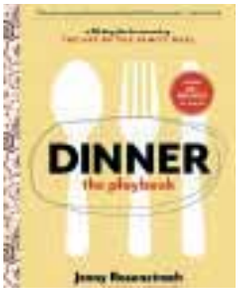
"Dinner: The Playbook" not only contains recipes, it helps families plan their meals a week out. / PROVIDED

Parenting hacks. Family dinners made easy — seriously



Family dinners are supposed to be a time when everyone puts his or her phone away, asks about everyone's day and enjoys a relaxing meal. But if you're a parent, you know that isn't exactly what happens. What's more likely is that you come home from work tired, your kids are asking you what's for dinner, nothing you suggest makes everyone happy and whatever you decide upon usually requires a trip to the store.

Jenny Rosenstrach, who wrote "Dinner: The Playbook" and also writes the blog "Dinner: A Love Story," wants you to know it doesn't have to be that way. Her book is a practical guide for families — especially families in which both parents work — to create simple, satisfying meals everyone will eat. It not only provides many answers to the eternal "What's for dinner?" question, it helps families plan out their meals week by week. Best of all, it's packed with delicious, easy recipes.

4 Must-stop places to go before school

Getting your kids ready for back-to-school is no easy feat. I have put together a #BTSLYSST of some of my must haves and things to do to get ready for the new school year.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

The kids' hair cutting pros

My boys head straight to Cozy Cuts For Kids on Third Avenue for their hair cuts. They have plenty of ways to keep kids entertained while getting their cuts, like video games and DVDs. Plus, they have a new hair line out called So Cozy so you can keep your children's hair looking FabULyss throughout the school year.

Where to do your shopping

Target is my favorite one-stop shop for all my kids' BTS needs. They have everything you'll need from school supplies to new clothes. I suggest taking one child at a time. Even though it requires multiple trips, it will make the process less overwhelming and your children will feel special getting your undivided attention.

The book series that will spark their creativity

I love reading books with my kids throughout the school year. One book series I'm really enjoying with my kids right now is the "Mother's Art World" series. It's a collection of books that introduces young children to the world of art. My kids love the stories, characters and gorgeous illustrations.

Getting your kids to school

Many parents ask me if it is better for kids to walk or bike to school each day. I've found the perfect solution in the Micro Kickboard. My two boys are obsessed and cannot wait to scoot off to school in style. The Micro Kickboard helps teach kids balance and coordination as well as how to steer, speed up and slow down.

Reviews

Tommy Hilfiger

1 The flower crowns and boho dresses that dominate Coachella's free spirits are so over. Tommy Hilfiger looked to the '60s and '70s music-festival girl to show you how to rock out in style. With a set designed like Woodstock, complete with a live drummer and floral lined runway, Hilfiger sent down sleek, fitted military-inspired suiting in burgundy and black with pops of gold — oh how very Sgt. Pepper of him. The retro influence continued with flared patchwork denim, effortless tunics with belts slung low and mod suede shifts with stars patterns cut out along the hem. Elsewhere, the celestial motif appeared on big faux fur jackets (yes, for spring!), sheer chiffon gowns and a scallop-edge bikini, modeled by no other than Kendall Jenner, officially making her rounds on the New York Fashion Week runway. But the real scene-stealer: a colorful care-free striped crochet frock. Now that's for a girl who stands out from the crowd. TINA CHADHA

DKNY

2 Donna Karan tapped into the core of what makes New York so special: diversity.

The designer culled from the city's melting pot for bold geometric prints, colorful graphic stripes and ethnic paisleys that appeared on long, lean, often oversized silhouettes.

As if there weren't enough going on, the looks came layered: Mini skirts, such as a sequin embellished number, were thrown over long, striped tube skirts. The magpie effect worked, thanks to a sublime color palette of tomato red, navy, caress blue, lime and nude — just as varied and unique as the residents that make up this town. TC

Opening Ceremony

3 It's safe to say that no other presentation this week can top Opening Ceremony's spring outing Sunday evening, which wasn't a runway show but a play written by director Spike Jonze and actor Jonah Hill.

As for the play — about the drama of cobbling together a spring collection hours before showtime — it was fun. The all-star cast included Elle Fanning, Dree Hemingway, Bobby Cannavale, Karlie Kloss, Rashida Jones, John Cameron Mitchell and Catherine Keener, who played exaggerated versions of the label's two founders, Humbert Leon and Carol Lim. There were lots of in-jokes, but also some moments of honesty, particularly about the industry's cruel treatment of models.

Oh, there were clothes onstage too, apparently inspired by the summer of 1991, and the "innocent, hazy dreams of suburban life" that characterized the two designers' youth. The structural patterns and shapes were modeled after early computer codes, while the colors — light pink, ceramic green and cerulean — evoked a swimming-pool-in-the-yard kind of feeling. RAQUEL LANERI

Celeb spotting

Diane Von Furstenberg

Here's how you show New York City that you're the most powerful woman in American fashion: have supermodel Naomi Campbell close your runway show. Ms. Campbell looked spunky in a white chiffon confection streaked with hot pink and orange. Otherwise, this was a pretty straightforward collection from Diane von Furstenberg, with lots of colorful prints, sexy silhouettes, bandeau tops and gingham, too, which is shaping up to be a trend this week. RL

The designer:

Hood by Air

The look: Post-apocalyptic urban warriors

The runway: The electrifing show sparked arguments about what it all meant: a response to Ferguson, a commentary on the breakdown of masculinity, a celebration of the individual? But designer Shayne Oliver also presented great, wearable clothes: endless variations on denim, leather bombers, deconstructed blazers and of course logo-emblazoned T-shirts, some in a trompe l'oeil armor print.

Insta-worthy: The Great Dane on the runway!

The takeaway: Expect the HBA cult to get bigger. RL

The designer:

Thakoon

The look: Moody paradise

The runway: Thakoon Panichgul's vacation-enticing collection of relaxed silhouettes (languid robes, silky cropped pants and bare shouldered blouses) seduced in a variety of prints (bold Tahitian florals, sophisticated polka dots, cheery palm fronds) done in lush burgundies and blues.

Insta-worthy: The striped knit skirt with electric blue raffia fringe. No one will lose you in a crowd.

The takeaway: Start researching a tropical getaway. TC

Obama needs to take charge

Re: 'We will "degrade and destroy" ISIS: Obama' (Metro, Sept. 4) As I read the news story on President Obama's address in Estonia, I noted Metro ran the "degrade and destroy" portion of what Obama stated to news reporters gathered around him, but it did not print the president's response to a follow-up question as to how we will degrade and destroy ISIS. What the president said in response became the center of the whole news story. The president started off sounding like General Douglas MacArthur but ended up sounding like former President Jimmy Carter. Obama went from speaking of destroying ISIS to seeking to "shrink" it into a "manageable problem." Who's in charge at the White House today? Back during Watergate, General Alexander Haig said he was. Now? No one is. ISIS acts with impunity.

PSU postseason

NCAA reinstates Penn State

Citing their commitment to reforming their football culture, the NCAA and Big 10 Conference reinstated Penn State's football team to postseason play in 2014 — a couple seasons sooner than expected. They also will give Penn State a full slate of scholarships in 2015-16. The Nittany Lions are 2-0 this season with victories against UCF and Akron.

Giants stumble in ugly opening loss

NFL. The Lions offense came out firing as the Giants put up a dud, 35-14, in their season opener in Detroit.

Johnson's second score came on a diving catch in the back of the end zone. / GETTY IMAGES

The only thing that looked more out of sorts than the Giants new offense was their secondary stumbling around the open field trying to cover Calvin Johnson.

In the end it was equal parts offensive and defensive misery which brought the Giants a 35-14 loss in their season opener Monday night.

The scene was ugly early on. Antrel Rolle, Stevie Brown and Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie — a secondary which is supposedly the strength of the team — got turned inside out by Johnson for a 67-yard touchdown catch just 2:49 into the game.

After a quick Giants three-and-out, Johnson was again wreaking havoc on the secondary with a 16-yard touchdown catch to cap a nine-play drive.

The brightest piece of the night for New York came from tight end Larry Donnell, who had a nice jump-ball catch to pull within 14-7.

But the momentum was never there. Eli Manning threw one of two interceptions on his opening drive of the second half and a Matthew Stafford rushing touchdown with 3:51 left in the third quarter and a Joique Bell rushing TD in the fourth capped a brutal debut.

MARK OSBORNE
@MetroNYSports
mark.osborne@metro.us

What went wrong ...

1 Unstoppable — No one expected Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie and the secondary to shut down Calvin Johnson, but it would've been nice to limit him to, say, one touchdown. Instead, he turned the Giants corners and safeties inside out all night.

2 No Cruz control — Victor Cruz had no impact on the game until the second half, and even then it was minimal. He had just two catches on five targets.

3 Mobile Matt — No one will ever confuse Matthew Stafford for Michael Vick, but he showed just enough mobility to bedevil the Giants' defense. He even rushed for a score to make it 27-7 and essentially end it.

Around the NFL

Monday is always a big day around the NFL, mostly for depressing injury news. We take a look at some of the biggest stories to emerge from the day after the first week of the season.

- No. 1 overall pick Jadeveon Clowney's rookie season has hit a speed bump already due to a torn meniscus in his right knee. The defensive end had surgery Monday and will miss four to six weeks.
- Colts Pro-Bowl defensive end Robert Mathis is done for the season after suffering a torn Achilles last week in practice. Mathis was already serving a four-game drug suspension.
- Panthers head coach Ron Rivera said Monday QB Cam Newton will start Week 2 after sitting out Sunday due to a rib injury.

Cilic takes US Open to secure first major

US Open. The Croatian, who was suspended last year, capped an unlikely final with a dominant win.

Marin Cilic played the U.S. Open final like he had an important dinner reservation in Midtown.

Utilizing a massive serve and flat, powerful groundstrokes to every corner of the court, the 6-foot-6 Croatian destroyed Japanese sensation Kei Nishikori, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3, in just one hour and 54 minutes to capture his first Grand Slam title.

Cilic, 25, became the first Croatian to win a major title since his coach, Goran Ivanisevic, won Wimbledon in 2001.

Cilic double-faulted on the first of three match points, but then smacked a backhand winner into the open court on the second before falling down on his back in celebration. He then made his way into his players' box where he hugged his entourage, including Ivanisevic.

"Everything I was working for and dreaming came [true] today and I feel for all the other players that are working. I think this is a big sign and big hope that if you're working hard, things are going to pay off," said Cilic, who had lost five of his seven previous encounters with Nishikori.

Cilic picked up $3 million in prize money for the biggest win of his career and will move to No. 9 in the world, while Nishikori moves to No. 8.

Cilic missed last year's U.S. Open after testing positive for a banned supplement he said was given to him inadvertently by his mother. He missed four months on the tour but used that time to work with Ivanisevic on his game.

"I truly believed he didn't do anything wrong in the sense that he did [not do] it on purpose," Roger Federer said after losing to Cilic in the semifinals on Saturday. "Was he stupid maybe? Maybe. But I feel like I know him well enough, and I don't think he would ever do it."

Marin Cilic knocked off No. 6 Tomas Berdych and No. 2 Roger Federer on his way to winning the 2014 U.S. Open on Monday. / GETTY IMAGES

By the numbers

250-1

The odds of Marin Cilic winning the U.S. Open at the beginning of the tournament were 250-1.

6

Cilic will move up six spots in the world rankings, from No. 15 to No. 9, after the victory.

4

Cilic was suspended four months last year, including the U.S. Open, after testing positive for a banned stimulant.

134

The hard-serving Cilic's fastest serve clocked in at 134 mph, while he sat in the 120- to 130-mph range all match.

Nishikori came up short. GETTY IMAGES

Said Cilic after the biggest win of his life: "I think this is all hard work in these last several years and especially this last year. My team has brought something special to me, especially Goran. We were working really hard. Most important of all the things that he brought to me was enjoying tennis and always having fun. I think I enjoyed my best tennis over here and played the best tennis in my life."

Seeded at No. 14 and No. 10, Cilic and Nishikori had set up the highly unlikely final between two men ranked outside the Top 10 by knocking off the top two seeds in the semifinals. Nishikori took out No. 1 seed Novak Djokovic in four sets on Saturday before Cilic crushed five-time champion No. 2 Federer in just one hour and 45 minutes.

"He was playing really well today," Nishikori said. "I couldn't play my tennis. I want to congratulate Marin and his team."

MLB releases schedule for 2015 season

Considering it looks like both the Mets and Yankees will miss the playoffs in 2014, it's not a bad time to move on to next year's schedule.

MLB released the 2015 schedule on Monday, and one of the more interesting notes was the strange timing of next year's Subway Series.

The Yankees and Mets will meet six times next season — as opposed to the now standard four — because the NL East and AL East are scheduled to meet in interleague play. But the series will come very early and very late in the season in 2015.

The first three-game set will be held at Yankee Stadium from April 24-26. And then the two sides will meet again — theoretically in the heart of a pennant race — from Sept. 18-20 at Citi Field.

The Mets open their season in Washington on April 6, with the home opener against the Phillies on April 13. The Yankees open at home against the Blue Jays on April 5. METRO
